CANON CANADA AND OCÉ CANADA STRONGER TOGETHER

MISSISSAUGA, ON, 2 January 2013: With the aim of creating the number one presence in the printing industry in Canada, Canon Canada Inc. is pleased to announce that effective immediately, Océ-Canada Inc. will become a wholly-owned subsidiary.

Building on an enhanced scale, a combined history of innovation and excellent client servicing, the new organization will capitalize on the complementary fit in product mix, channel mix and business lines resulting in an outstanding client offer spanning the entire printing industry.

“We are delighted to welcome Océ Canada, the ideal partner in every respect, into the Canon Canada family,” said Kevin Ogawa, President and CEO of Canon Canada Inc. “We are confident that this winning combination will contribute greatly to our goal of becoming the overall number one presence in the printing industry in Canada.”

Canon and Océ will be able to build upon each other’s long-standing history and proven track record of innovation and customer service to create a strong joint enterprise capable of long term success. The similar technology-oriented backgrounds and corporate values will be important drivers in establishing us as Canon’s leading printing experts.

“We are very much looking forward to joining forces with Canon,” said Patrick D’Souza, President of Océ-Canada Inc. “There is a great fit between our companies with each having a strong commitment to technology and innovation. Océ offers strength and expertise in areas of production printing and wide format printing that will enhance the overall Canon offering. I am confident Océ customers and Canon customers will benefit greatly from this new relationship.”

Kevin Ogawa will serve as Chairman and CEO of Océ-Canada Inc., as well as maintaining his role as President and CEO of Canon Canada Inc. Patrick D’Souza will continue in his role as President of Océ Canada.
